

VACANCY: Trustees for a small, well-established Manchester-based INGO, supporting women workers in global supply chains

Who are Women Working Worldwide?

WWW a small, feminist, trade justice, anti-poverty, labour rights organisation located in Central Manchester, at the Royal Exchange. Since 1985 we have worked with international partner organisations to help empower women workers to claim their rights as workers. We work with a range of partners in UK, Europe, Africa, Asia and Latin America including trade unions, women's organisations and NGOs.

Recent projects include research into gender tool kits, gender analysis of agricultural value chains and a comparative analysis of gender work in the flower, tea and banana industries. We have a long association with floriculture in East Africa and have worked on Living Wage and Sexual Harassment projects with partners in Ethiopia, Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda. We also have a long track record of supporting women workers in the garments industry in Asia and Africa.

Our current goals are focused on strengthening our organisation particularly through access to new funding channels, increasing our capacity to deliver gender justice projects with partners in Africa and Asia, building our advocacy work and awareness raising in the UK.
