

Developing strategies for change for women workers in African horticulture

Our research shows that the differential between minimum/actual and calculated living wages being paid to workers is far too large.

Our research shows that the differential between minimum/actual and calculated living wages being paid to workers is far too large.

Our research shows that the differential between minimum/actual and calculated living wages being paid to workers is far too large.

Our research shows that the differential between minimum/actual and calculated living wages being paid to workers is far too large.

Our research shows that the differential between minimum/actual and calculated living wages being paid to workers is far too large.

Our research shows that the differential between minimum/actual and calculated living wages being paid to workers is far too large.

www.women-ww.org/

Project partners: Uganda – UWEA | Tanzania – TPAWU | Ethiopia – NFFPFATU | UK – Women Working Worldwide